Freedom Month

Looking back over the past 10 months it has been a great riding year! I've had the opportunity to take few super road trips, and met a ton of great folks from all across the country. The change of the landscape almost from one curve to the next is amazing and diverse, and wide variety of people and cultures that make up our country is truly something that has to be experienced to appreciate.

This November is kinda unusual because we have three big days to celebrate and this only happens 25 times a century! First there is our national Election Day, second Veteran's Day and third, Thanksgiving.

As bikers, we share a desire for freedom. Bikers are somewhat rebellious, and riding a motorcycle allows us the freedom to express ourselves. To tell society, yea there are rules, but you can't rule the wind or the call of the open road and that is what these three days are all about.

There's a reason that a huge number of veterans are bikers. Veterans share a common bond, a sense of pride in country and what our nation has endured for the past 200 plus years. There's a real connection between what our country represents and our freedom. There is no better way of telling the world that, than riding a motorcycle. It represents freedom, self expression, individualism and the American pioneer spirit.

This November 4th we'll have a chance to make a huge difference. We'll have a chance to voice our opinion not only here but to the world and you can bet the world is listenin'. Being an American is kinda like to being part of the biker community. You can say what you want about bikers but the facts are, we set our own standards, live by our own code of "...If I have to explain, you wouldn't understand", our word is our bond, and we take care of our own. If a biker is stranded on the side of the road, another biker would never leave one stranded! So the same is with America. The world can think or say what they want about America but when we Americans unite we are a force to be reckoned with, as history has shown. More times than once we have united in the name of individual freedom for all and changed the course of history, and the world has had to take notice. Americans have laid down their lives in conflicts all over the world not to conquer but to set free. We have fought in foreign lands not to force our beliefs and way of life on others, but to guarantee them theirs. American soldiers occupy foreign countries not to exploit them but to help.

Yea, this November is special. So when you sit down for that Thanksgiving dinner think back to the first pilgrims (they probably would have been bikers) and the hardship they had to deal with to get America started. Take a moment and thank God for America, that you are an American and that you can, without fear, express your individualism and pray for those who are forbidden to express their individualism or self expression. Be sure to up hold that long standing American tradition of "eating so much you can't breathe" and after dinner take a ride for freedom and for God and country!
